

JOE TORRE

is known for his 60-plus-year career in baseball as a player, broadcaster, executive, and Hall of Fame manager. But behind all the success, Joe carried the hidden scars of growing up in an abusive home, where he experienced isolation, fear, and shame. As Joe came to terms with those experiences in adulthood, he was driven to ensure that every child feels safe at home.

YOU ARE NOT ALONE. IT'S NOT YOUR FAULT.
THERE IS HELP AVAILABLE

Here are a few simple ways to offer support to those who may be facing challenges:

- Show your own emotions—it helps others feel safe expressing theirs.
- Validate their feelings so they feel understood and more in control.
- Offer language to help them name and share what they're feeling.
- Model healthy ways of handling challenges so they can build confidence in their own coping skills.
- Encourage and acknowledge when they express themselves openly.

SAFE AT HOME.

IN 2002, JOE AND HIS WIFE, ALI TORRE, FOUNDED SAFE AT HOME TO END THE CYCLE OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AND ABUSE THROUGH EDUCATION.

Safe At Home offers a variety of resources, programs, and services aimed at equipping young people, families, and communities with the knowledge and skills to recognize harm, build healthy relationships, and seek support when they need it.

By fostering safety, shared responsibility, and resilience, we create generational change and help shape a world free from violence.

“The kids may not bear our last name, but I think it’s still our responsibility to take care of them.”
